If you have 20 people you are working with who are diagnosed with just a mental illness, at least half of them have, or have had at some time in their life, a co-occurring substance use disorder. The same for those of you working in the addictions field. Half of your clients have a mental illness diagnosis. This audio conference will help you begin to identify those that have a co-occurring disorder and give you some basic information and tools to start to address the substance use. We all know that change is difficult and knowing what to do when someone isn't ready to change is a challenge. This audio conference will address some basic strategies to help a client move forward in the change process.

Learning Objectives

- You will be able to discuss integrated treatment for co-occurring disorders.
- You will be able to identify the first stages of assessment.
- You will be able to review basic strategies that help clients move forward in the change process.

AGENDA

Integrated Treatment as a Model to Address Co-Occurring Disorders

- High Co-Occurrence of Mental Illness and Substance Use Disorder
- Integrated Dual Disorder Treatment as One of the Evidence Based Practices, Superior to Parallel or Sequential Treatment
- Features of a Dual Disorders Program With a Recovery Oriented Philosophy

Assessment

- First Stages of Assessment – Detection and Classification, Using Standardized Instruments
- Functional Assessment – Psychosocial Assessment
- Functional Analysis – Looking at the Pros and Cons of the Person's Substance Use
- Treatment Planning – Putting It All Together

Interventions

- Stage Wise Interventions – Engagement, Persuasion, Active Treatment, Relapse Prevention

- Group Interventions: Stage Wise Groups, 12-Step Peer Recovery Groups, 12-Step Facilitation Groups
- Family Work – Multiple Family Groups
